

THE BLANKET

A long time ago, there was once a huge brilliant blanket. This blanket spread out all across the universe as we know it today. The blanket served many purposes amongst creation as well as creating a covering to hold the many pockets of knowledge that would be utilized one day. This blanket was known by many names by many different forms of life. But more importantly, this blanket existed as a creation of love in order to maintain harmony and balance throughout the universe.

There were four basic threads that created the center of the weaving of the blanket. These threads were the colors of red, yellow, black, and white. The threads began from a single strand that was spun out of the creative principle of life force. This single thread was not known as any particular shade or hue of color as we know it.

The single thread was begun out of the vibration of a single thought that resonated so perfectly that it began to take form. The single thread began in the realm of space that we do not remember; moved through the space of thought that we do remember at times; and began to assume a solid formation within the creative life principle of movement and form. If one was to imagine the single thread to be of a particular shape, form, and color; it could possibly be the clearest and finest crystalline you can see. Finer than the most expensive glass you have ever seen: Clearer than any icicle that you have known. It would be brighter than any ice crystal that you have seen glittering in the sun, as well as purer in sound than any tuning fork that was ever made. You see, you would have to reach way into the depth that is your created being, in order to even begin to glimpse the very little bit of how clear and fine this thread truly was.

The single thread, in its becoming of form and shape, began to shift and change. The shifting and changing created a split, in which the four main threads grew out of. The red thread was to represent the fire and life of the single thread. The yellow thread was to represent the mental clarity and genius of the single thread. The black thread was to represent the void and beginning out of which the single thread began. The white thread was to represent the purity of thought and life principle out of which the single thread began. Each thread was deeply connected to the single thread even though the form and shape had changed and divided. Each thread was born out of one single thread and in that birth, would forever be joined as one, even though the shape, color, and form had changed.

The four threads joined to create a pattern upon which the blanket would be woven. In the center was the single thread out of which the four threads began. From this base, each thread moved outward into a different direction. As the threads intertwined and wove through the space upon which the blanket would be created, there became many other shades of colors that emerged.

Patterns began to emerge within the weaving; patterns of shape and form that had dimensional boundaries. What were once lines became circles and squares and rectangles. The circles and squares and rectangles became dimensional figures as they joined in being woven one on top of the other. The shapes began to move and blend together, creating beautiful arrays of colors and forms of beauty that had never before been seen. The threads continued to join and weave together stretching farther and farther outwards from the center.

With the threads moving outward and weaving, the blanket began to move with the shifting threads. The blanket began to glow brilliantly in the space that it was encompassing. The shades of colors and the patterns held within began to dance and move as if the blanket were filled with life itself. With the shapes, colors, and patterns emerging, the blanket shifted and moved creating pockets within the space of the blanket.

The pockets within the space of the blanket were lit with the brilliant colors and dimensional shapes of the weaving that surrounded that space. The colors and shapes of the weaving began to dance together in these spaces with a slight ripple. The slight ripple did not even move the unfolding blanket - instead the ripple was creating delightful vibrations with each pocket.

The vibration within each pocket began to resonate together with a certain tone that was contained within each pocket. This tone varied in pitch due to the different colors, shapes, and patterns within each pocket. What began as a slight ripple, turned into a contained area of sound and vibrational beauty that was unique to each pocket within the blanket. With its own vibration, tone, and enclosed area; each pocket began to resonate with the knowledge of the threads, colors, shapes, and patterns that created that pocket. As this knowledge was confined to the pocket area, it began to join and resonate, creating a strength within itself.

As the threads of each pocket, were woven into the blanket, the single thread that began the blanket was attuned to each pocket. The single thread that was still connected to the life principle, passed this vibration of knowledge back into the life principle as the blanket continued to be woven. The life principle out of which the blanket was begun, awakened to the different vibrations that were being passed through the single thread. The life principle grew and expanded just as the blanket was growing and expanding.

The brilliance of the blanket was surpassing any known brilliance that had existed within the life principle out of which it was born. The brilliant blanket was stretching farther and farther than the life principle has ever known. As the beautiful blanket stretched outward into the universe with the weaving, the universe appeared to expand and grow with the running threads. The limitations that had been placed upon the universe were being woven away as the blanket continued to grow and expand.

The various pockets of knowledge kept rippling and forming all throughout the growing beautiful blanket. As the life principle expanded, and the universe expanded, and the beautiful blanket expanded, the pockets of knowledge expanded. Areas where there had previously existed nothing due to limitations of the life principle of thought, were now filled with a beautiful blanket in which there were unlimited pockets of knowledge. The patterns continued to emerge with brilliant uniqueness and the colors continued to blend into shades that were not only unique but also harmonic in vibration. The pockets continued to evolve through these unique movements of the threads that were creating the beautiful blanket. The life principle continued to grow and evolve through the evolution of the beautiful blanket. The blanket continued to weave its way through the universe, reaching farther and farther.

Many different peoples began to see the brilliance of the beautiful blanket as it spread across their part of the universe. Many different peoples found the various pockets of knowledge that were contained within their section of the blanket within their part of the universe. Many different names were given to the beautiful, brilliant blanket and the pockets of knowledge that were found. Some people even became so knowledgeable, that they were able to weave their way through the pockets of knowledge into other areas of the universe other than their own.

These peoples were those that would spread the knowledge of harmony and balance that was contained within the knowledge of the pockets. These peoples were those that would move through the universe in order to bring knowledge of other pockets back to the pockets of knowledge that existed within their own segment of the universe. These were the peoples that would teach the essence of the knowledge that was held within each pocket of the blanket. These were the peoples that would teach of harmony and balance within their own segment of the universe in order to open up the limitations that existed underneath the beautiful and brilliant blanket.

As the life principle continued to expand and grow with the expansion and growth of the beautiful and brilliant blanket; it is only then possible to assume that the brilliant and beautiful blanket that was created a long time ago, is still weaving itself across the universe today. For the single thread out of which the four main threads were born, is still very connected to the life principle, leaving the expansions to only continue outward into the universe as the weaving of the beautiful and brilliant blanket. As the brilliant blanket continues to move across the universe, so then does the life principle out of which all is born and created. As peoples continue to find pockets of knowledge both within their segment of the brilliant blanket covering the universe and other pockets in other areas of the universe, the life principle continues to grow and expand through the people's growth and expansion as well.

The huge and brilliant blanket had a beginning in life principle; creation through all of the peoples and life within the universe; and form through all of the pockets of knowledge contained within it. The huge and brilliant blanket had a simple beginning that in turn created many other beginnings which in turn created many pockets of knowledge that created many harmonic vibrations that created many ending of limitations that created many beginnings throughout the universe.

So a long time ago a huge and brilliant blanket was formed to cover the universe in harmony and love and continues through life principle to weave its way across the universe today. The huge and brilliant blanket continues to create pockets of knowledge in the ripples of its expansion that are still available to all peoples of the universe.

Perhaps there are peoples that continue to move from pocket to pocket within the universe in order to teach a message of love and harmony as well as teach of the expansion of limitations that are available through the huge and brilliant blanket today. Perhaps those peoples that are teaching of these things are from different pockets of the universe that the huge and brilliant blanket covers. Perhaps we, as peoples, could expand our thoughts and our hearts so that our limitations within the segment of the universe that we live within; would become as the huge and brilliant blanket filled with pockets of knowledge and harmony and love. Then perhaps those that are moving through the pockets within the huge and brilliant blanket across the universe would be able to extend their message and teachings of harmony and love in an unlimited expression - just as the blanket has become unlimited within its very creation. Perhaps in our expansion, we would see beyond the single thread of the blanket, the four threads out of which was born the beautiful and brilliant and huge weaving of the blanket in which pockets of knowledge are held; and see beyond the limitations of our own life within the entirety of the life principle of the entire universe.

As the huge and brilliant blanket weaves its way across the universe in harmony, balance, and love from that single thread of life principle so long ago; may the pockets of knowledge held within our own segment of the universe open peoples to the teachings of harmony, balance, and love that is held within the blanket around us.